CARTWRIGHT--

One of the most noted of the refugees who settled at Kingston, was Richard Cartwright. He was a native of Albany, and was forced to leave his home because of his loyalty. He found an asylum with others at Carleton Island, or Fort Niagara. Some time after the conclusion of the war he was in partnership with Robert, afterward Honorable Hamilton, at Niagara. But sometime about 1790, he settled in Kingston, where, as a merchant he acquired extensive property. The Government mills at Napanee came into his possession. Those who remember his business capacity, say it was very great. He was a man of "liberal education and highly esteemed. Suffered at last calmly and patiently, and died at Montreal, 27th July, 1815, aged fifty years."

The estimation in which this gentleman was held is sufficiently attested by the following, which we take from the Kingston Gazette:

York, March 13, 1816.

A new township in the rear of Darlington, in the district of Newcastle, has been surveyed, and is now open for the location of the U.E.Loyalists and military claimants. We understand that His Excellency, the Lieutenant-Governor to testify in the most public manner the high sense which he entertained of the merit and services of the late Honorable Richard Cartwright, has been pleased to honor this township with the name of CARTWRIGHT, a name ever to be remembered in Canada with gratitude and respect. Dignified with a seat in the Legislative Council, and also with a high appointment in the militia of the Province, Mr. Cartwright discharged the duties incident to those situations, with skill, fidelity, and attention. Animated with the purest principle of loyalty, and with an ardent zeal for the preservation of that noble constitution which we enjoy, he dedicated, when even struggling under great bodily infirmity, the remains of a well spent life to the service of his country. Nor was he less perspicuous for his exemplary behavior in private life; obliging to his equals - kind to his friends - affectionate to his family, he passed through life, eminently distinguished for virtuous and dignified propriety of conduct, uniformly maintaining the "exalted character of a true patriot, and of a great man."

He was a good type of the old school, a tall, robust man, with a stern countenance, and a high mind. He had sustained the loss of one eye, but the remaining one was sharp and piercing. As the first Judge of Mecklenburgh, he discharged his duties with great firmness, amounting, it is said, often to severity. As an officer of the militia, a position he held in 1812, he was a strict disciplinarian, and often forgot that the militiamen were respectable farmers. Mr. Cartwright left two sons, the late John S. Cartwright, and the Rev. Robert Cartwright. It is unnecessary to say that the descendants of Judge Cartwright are among the most respectable, influential and wealthy, living in the Midland District.

It is a very common mistake to suppose that the only way to get rid of a bad habit is to try to suppress it. This is a very dangerous policy, and it is almost certain to fail.

Yours truly,
J. H. P.

The first step in the treatment of a bad habit is to recognize it. This is not always easy, for the habit may be so subtle that it is not noticed at first. But once it is recognized, the next step is to try to understand its cause. This is also not always easy, for the cause may be so deep-seated that it is not immediately apparent. But once the cause is understood, the next step is to try to remove it. This is the most difficult step, for it often requires a great deal of willpower and self-control. But if it is done, the habit will be gone for good.

Loyalists & expended a great deal on that acct. He had refused taking an oath to the Americans.

Produces Certificates from Sir John Johnson & 6 others to his Loyalty & to the assistance.

He had 100 acres near Cherry Valley, bought of Peter Martin in 1775, took it for Debt of £100. It was partly improved, about 10 acres cleared. No buildings but a Hut. Clarius had entered on possession. Val. it at £100 York Curr.

Lost Cloathes, Furniture & various articles from his house at Albany. They came to Clarius's house in 1778 when he had refused to take the oath & destroyed & plundered his effects to ~~the~~ above £100 York.

Advanced Money on different occasions to Loyalists.

He suffered a 2nd time from a mob on the King's Birthday. His house was surrounded by 3 or 4,000 People. He was beat & abused & his effects destroyed.

Said out a great deal of Money in Support of Loyalists.

When he came away he was allowed to sell some of his effects that were left at Vendue, but great part was plundered from him to the amount of 50£

He was appointed to Post of Deputy Postmaster for the City and Co. of Albany. Produces his appointment from Dr. Franklin & Wm Hunter in 1756. He held this for many years, but gave it up before the Rebellion began.

Resides at Cataragui.

Major Hughes certified to his Loyalty in very favourable terms, & that he had been at his House where he seemed to have everything comfortable about him & to be in good circumstances.

Marginal Note:- Refers himself to Major Hughes at Montreal; seems very good man; his certificates are strong.

He was handsomely remembered in the will of the Hon. James McGill, of Montreal, after whom, probably, he was called. If he had lived long enough to accept the bequest, he would have had to assume the name & arms of McGill in order ~~of~~ to enjoy it. The will which bears date Jan. 8, 1811, became effective only in 1813. The Hon. Richard Cartwright, who was one of the executors, was not able to reach Montreal to appear with the other executors when the will was being proved, on Dec. 30, but he made a separate appearance on Feb. 2, 1811. All Things Considered

7 April 1961

By Deane Van Luven

LONG PROMINENT in the law, politics and business, the Cartwright family has a Kingston connection dating back to the American Revolution.

The Honorable Richard Cartwright was one of the first judges of the assize court in this district. He owned the site of Fort Henry. Another Cartwright (Sir Richard) became a famed Liberal politician and minister of finance in Mackenzie's cabinet in the 1870's.

Some were doctors, two were soldiers and others engaged in business or the law. One is now a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada.

IN THE DAYS when the stocks and the whipping post were in use in the tiny settlement which grew into Kingston, Richard Cartwright the younger was a pioneer merchant here.

His father, Richard the elder, had emigrated from England to Albany, on the Hudson River, about 1750. His son was born in Albany. The latter, as a Loyalist when the American Revolution broke out in 1775, served in the Rangers under Colonel Butler. This unit for some time had duties in the area near the fortified post where Kingston now stands.

Although he had first studied for the church, the younger Richard after the war decided to settle here and went into business as a partner of Robert Hamilton. He imported goods from Europe and traded for local farm produce and furs. Eventually he bought the Clark grist mill at Napanee.

MORE LOYALISTS and other settlers began to carve farmsteads out of the forests on the northeast shore of Lake Ontario. Courts soon had to be set up, and Richard became one of the first magistrates.

By 1800, almost a generation after the end of the American war, Kingston had become an important centre, but still a very small town, with only a few houses of stone or wood, and many of logs. Its streets usually were ankle-deep in mud.

But it had a regular market, and quite a few stores, including Cartwright's. Others were operated by J. Cumming, Peter Smith, T. Markland, John Kirby and Company, L. Herkimer, J. Robins, D. McDonell and J. Forsyth. In 1801, the exports from the town included 8,084 barrels of flour.

There was little cash in circulation, and sometimes supplies grew a bit short in late winter. Practically all transportation was by water.

THE PENALTY for stealing even a small bit of goods, if worth more than five shillings, was death. A story, not too well authenticated, is that the first Kingston Cartwright and a MacLean were the two magistrates who jointly sentenced a peddler, in 1789, to death for stealing a watch.

It was discovered after the hanging that the watch hadn't been stolen, and there was talk in some quarters that the real reason for the hanging was that the peddler was a Methodist preacher.

Richard Cartwright became a member of the Legislative Assembly, and died in 1814. Of his large family, only the twin sons, Robert David and John survived. Robert was a minister and John a lawyer, and they inherited from their father very large landholdings and considerable other wealth.

When the two brothers died, within a short time of each other, in the 1840's, it was discovered that John owned all his father's property. The children of Robert David were dissatisfied with this and the eldest son, Richard (afterwards Sir Richard) started a law suit against the children of John.

Richard claimed in his suit that his grandfather's estate should have been divided equally. He was able to prove this, and won the suit.

His branch of the family, from which Henry L. Cartwright, now practising law in Kingston, is descended, acquired, as a result of the court's decision, a good deal of property, mostly land in and around Kingston.

The two branches of the family were at loggerheads for a generation.

LATER, while still young, Richard entered politics, and sat in Parliament for Lennox County. He became minister of finance in Mackenzie's cabinet, but when Sir John A. Macdonald's Conservative government regained power, Sir Richard Cartwright was in opposition for 20 years. He was a very effective critic of the Conservative government of that time, as he was a powerful speaker, with a biting tongue.

Wilfred Laurier led the Liberals to victory in 1896, starting a period in power which lasted until 1911, and Sir Richard became the new minister of trade and commerce. He had expected to be finance minister once again, but Montreal financial interests blocked him.

Two handsome stone residences in Kingston were owned by Sir Richard and his brother, the Rev. Robert Cartwright, on King street. The latter, who devoted his life to the church, was for long the beloved assistant rector of St. George's, before the present Anglican cathedral was built.

CARTWRIGHT A PROPHET.

A Letter He Wrote to a London
Oct. 5 Paper in 1871. 1912

Toronto Star Weekly.

That Sir Richard Cartwright, who passed away at Kingston, after over half a century as one of the outstanding figures in Canadian public life, was a seer with more than ordinary vision is evidenced by a letter which he wrote to the Canadian News of London, England, in December, 1871. He looked into the future and saw the success of Canadian confederation, the South African and Australian federations, and prophesied the day would come when Britain and her daughter nations would join with the United States in a great Anglo-Saxon league against the aggressions of continental Europe. He forecasted an imperial council, at which representatives of the colonies of the empire would sit and discuss questions concerning their mutual interests. And he foresaw also the difficulty in the way of giving this council any authority. Said he in the letter: "It is more than doubtful whether such a body, even supposing it succeeded in effecting something like a bona fide union between the parties, would add one particle to the actual strength of the empire; while there is no question at all that if things remain as they are in other respects the mere fact of its existence would hamper and embarrass English statesmen in no ordinary degree."

Sir Richard, as one of the authors of the reciprocity pact, had to suffer at the hands of its opponents the charge of disloyalty, whereas there was really no more loyal Canadian than he. In this same letter, written in 1871, he wrote: "We are as a people most thoroughly desirous of continuing part and parcel of the British Empire, and although most undoubtedly anxious to cultivate friendly relations with the United States as far as practicable, we neither wish to become incorporated with that power, nor even to be made to feel that we are only maintaining a separate existence at their will and pleasure."

Sir Richard was a firm believer in free trade principles, and he could never be persuaded that there was any danger to Canada in tearing down tariff walls between Canada and the United States.

Friend of United States.

Boston Transcript.

The death of Sir Richard John Cartwright deprives Canada of one of her most distinguished statesmen, a man of thorough training and long service in the higher public affairs of his country, and one whose loss the United States deeply regrets, because he was her very good friend. Even Champ Clark's flippant remark did not worry him, because his experience enabled him to easily comprehend the superficial character of the man. Twice was he acting premier, in the absence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and had he been invested with the full dignity of that high office he would not have disgraced it.

Had Backbone and Courage.

Brockville Times.

Sir Richard may have lacked some of the smoothness of the average modern politicians but he had what is still better—the backbone and courage to be true to his honest beliefs. Pity it is that there are not more like him in Canadian public life. Many a premier has met his doom by the weakness of his colleagues.

day's work. Women banana peddlers in South America may be seen on the streets with a basket or pan of bananas balanced on their heads and a child lying within the folds of the sash at their backs. So the child rests all day and is not removed from this position until the mother returns home in the evening.

The position of the child depends upon the arrangement of the sash. If the babe is very young the sash forms a cradle and the child lies full length within it. If older, he is allowed to thrust its little legs through openings in the garment and sits all day astride his mother's hip. The same method of child carrying is used throughout Africa.

The Samite mother carries her child astride her shoulder, shifting it as occasion demands. No device or invention is used, but the child clings to her from instinct and so is held in position. The Australians of Carpen-

Until Released by Wonderful Samaria Prescription.

Liquor sets up inflammation and irritation of the stomach and weakens the nerves. The steady or periodical (spree) drinker is often forced to drink even against his will by his unnatural physical condition.

Samaria Prescription stops the raving, steadies the nerves, builds up the general health and makes drink actually distasteful and nauseous. It is tasteless and odorless, and can be given with or without the knowledge of the patient.

Thousands of Canadian homes have been saved from misery and disgrace by some devoted wife, mother or daughter through this wonderful Canadian remedy. The money formerly wasted in drink has restored happiness, home comforts, education and respect to the families formerly in want and despair.

Read the following, one of the numerous unsolicited testimonials received:

"I can never repay you for your remedy. It is worth more than life to me. My husband has been offered liquor several times, but would not touch it. He said it had no charm for him now. May God's choice blessing ever rest on you and yours are my prayer ever. No one knows it but those who have tried it. As soon as I can I will see others that I know would give up to stop their husbands from drinking. I will give them your address."

Dear Mr. Burleigh

For a number of years I have heard your name mentioned, and seen it in various papers and journal, as an authority on the history of the Bath, Niagara and Kingston area. I have wanted to meet you, but have hesitated to drop in on you unexpectedly, and am therefore writing this letter by way of an introduction for myself.

Since my retirement two years ago I have started to collect and collate what Cartwright family records I have been able to get my hands on, and some of them might be of interest to you. I believe I have about two hundred letters and other documents, dated variously from 1777 to 1830, two diaries of that period, and a number of family traditions and stories told to me by elderly aunts many years ago. One of these in particular is something which you may have knowledge of, and this is the reason for my writing you.

Can you give me, or direct me to where I can find any information about the milestones on old No. 2 Highway, between Napanee and Kingston? There is a rather romantic family story about my grandfather, Sir Richard Cartwright, having put them there and I have often wondered about this. A year or so ago, I personally checked them and at the moment there are only 15 left of the original 24. Two of the missing stones are in Upper Canada Village at Monksburg, and I am inclined to believe that this 25 mile stretch of highway between Napanee and Kingston, is one of the few places where mile-stones were ever installed in Canada.

Any information you could give me would be very much appreciated.

Dear Mr. Burleigh

Thank you for your prompt answer to my previous letter. I am sorry to hear that you have no information on the old milestones on the York Road between Kefauver and Kingston. If your son through his position in the Dept. of Highways is able to find anything I would certainly appreciate hearing from you further. However, I am not too optimistic as to that source as about fifteen years ago I made a similar request for information from the then Superintendent in Kingston. All I could get from him was "We are very curious about them ourselves, but have no information. If you learn anything please let us know!"

The family story concerning these milestones was told to me at least fifty years ago by an aunt who died in her nineties not too many years ago. According to her the milestones were installed by my grandfather (Sir Richard) a few years after he reached his majority, and after a year or two of a bitter family quarrel and law suit, came into his fortune. As grandfather was born in 1835 this would set a date of 1856-1860, as perhaps the period when the milestones were put in. According to my aunt, grandfather used to drive or ride over to Nafanee from Kingston, every few months, to look after his property and collect his "quarter" rents. As you no doubt are aware, Nafanee grew up on Cortright property and my father told me once that prior to 1900 the rents came to about $30,000 a year. On one early occasion when grandfather was on horseback and returning to Kingston with 3 or 4000. in cash in his saddle bags, he was held up by two thugs, armed with clubs, and with the proverbial "standard deliver". He was on horseback, and they were on foot, so he rode them down and escaped with his money intact. However even afterwards when alone and on horse back, he would take a different route each time back to Kingston, and frequently rode across Country, jumping the farm fences as he came to them. Eventually, of course, he had to get back to the highway, the York Road, and usually was puzzled as to where he was and how far it was to Kingston and home. So he had the milestones put in, to tell him how far it was to Kingston or to Napanee!

I have speculated that if there were newspapers published in Kingston or Napanee during the above mentioned period, a careful search of them would (or might) turn up the information. My interest in the story is to authenticate or disprove this family legend. I believe my grandfather was first elected to Parliament in 1863, in what was then Province Upper Canada, and it is quite possible that the milestones were put in at Government expense — although in that case why were no other roads similarly marked? I have been told that the Rappahannock-Kingston mileston^{es} are unique, which lends some support to this family story.

I am most interested to hear that you have a small file on the Cartwright family, and I would very much appreciate the privilege of being allowed to examine it some time. By the way, Mr. Chard the editor of the U. S. Gazette, has been after me for some time to do an article for him, and I just recently sent him a few pages entitled "A Cartwright Second Family Letter, from Charleston, South Carolina, dated Apr. 14, 1811". If it is published in the Gazette you may find it of some interest.

Again many thanks for your most interesting letter

Yours very truly

Dear Dr. Burlingame:

I finished reading your delightful little book "Forgotten Leaves etc." some time ago & have been planning to write you ever since — first to tell you how much I enjoyed it, and second to ask if you can give me the source of one of the dates you mention in your article about my great great grandfather (pp. 57-63). You mention that he did not leave Albany until Oct 26, 1778. Previously I had been given two other dates, i.e. 1777 and 1779, as to this, & needless to say I would like to have the proper year confirmed.

I am planning to be in Kingston this coming Wednesday & Thursday (Oct 23-24) & will telephone you to see if I can drive out to Bath & spend an hour or so with you. I might add that I have a copy of the Cartwright family tree, for your records and files.

yours sincerely
